

Recognize Symptoms of Mental Health distress, Take Action

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico – Hurricanes are life-changing events. People are sometimes displaced from homes, children miss school, and plans of all sorts are put on hold. Unfamiliar feelings and stress can be natural reactions to this uncertainty.

Some typical symptoms of stress include:

- Not wanting to take part in things that normally bring joy.
- Feelings of anxiety or hopelessness.
- Thinking about self-harm.

People are often reluctant to acknowledge emotional change; however, the body has ways of communicating mental distress. Signals may include:

- Persistent headaches.
- Difficulty concentrating.
- Stomach problems.
- Insomnia.
- Poor appetite or overeating.
- Low energy.

The body's ability to communicate emotional problems allows you to begin healing or to help those around you. The following actions and resources offer opportunities to address symptoms you discover in yourself or others:

- Talking: Talking with somebody can be the most healing thing to do. Whether it's family, friends, neighbors, spiritual leaders, or a counselors, conversations about life start the process of feeling better.
- Listening: Listening to somebody else's troubles may help you feel more comfortable in talking about your own. Listening also reinforces a sense that you "aren't in it alone." Try starting a conversation with a simple question like

FEMA

Page 1 of 3

“How are you doing?” “Is your family ok?” Showing others that you care about them will make both of you feel less alone.

- Routine: Establish a routine to help set a new normal. Get up at the time every day, take care of your hygiene, and set goals. If your work and school schedules are interrupted, make new ones. Block off times to take care of tasks you look forward to and those you dread: paperwork, recovery-related telephone calls, social networking—having order in your day lets you know that you’re still in control.
- Exercise: Physical exercise really is good for body and mind, there are proven positive reactions. Maybe your fitness center is closed or the bike/running trail is unusable – then find something else to keep your body active.
- Go outside and meet with people: Some people feel like they need to stay in bed when they are stressed. They have harmful thoughts that circle around and around because they are idle. Getting out of bed and visiting a new place can help interrupt those cyclic thoughts. Attend social gatherings or at least take a walk and take note of improvements in your surroundings.
- Check with your primary care physician: Your doctor can help connect you with mental health services. If you were previously seeing a mental health professional, return to your normal psychiatric care provider and routine. If this is not possible you can seek help identifying a new provider at your local health center.
- Call the free, Linea PAS Counseling Hotline: The friendly people staffing the hotline will talk with you in English or Spanish, 24 hours a day, seven days per week. The hotline is available whether you are calling about yourself, somebody else, to just “talk” with somebody, or to get help with the next step. Call 1-(800)-981-0023.

###

FEMA’s mission is to support our citizens and first responders to ensure that as a nation we work together to build, sustain, and improve our capability to prepare for, protect against, respond to, recover from, and mitigate all hazards.

Disaster recovery assistance is available without regard to race, color, religion, nationality, sex, age, disability, English proficiency or economic status. If you or someone you know has been discriminated against, call FEMA toll-free at 800-621-3362 (voice, 711/VRS - Video Relay Service). Multilingual operators are available (press 2 for Spanish).

FEMA

Page 2 of 3

TTY: 800-462- 7585.

The SBA is the federal government's primary source of money for the long-term rebuilding of disaster-damaged property. SBA helps businesses of all sizes, private non-profit organizations, homeowners and renters, which can cover the cost of replacing lost or disaster-damaged real estate and personal property. These disaster loans cover losses not fully compensated by insurance or other recoveries and do not duplicate benefits of other agencies or organizations.

Follow us at: www.fema.gov/hurricane-mariawww.facebook.com/femapuertorico www.twitter.com/femaregion2

The social media links provided are for reference only. FEMA does not endorse any non-government websites, companies or applications.

FEMA

Page 3 of 3