

Buy Flood Insurance Now Before It's Too Late

Release Date: May 7, 2018

Hurricane Season Begins June 1

ORLANDO, Fla. – Hurricane season begins soon so Florida home and business owners and renters should consider buying a National Flood Insurance policy before it's too late.

It takes 30 days from the date of purchase for an NFIP policy to become effective. Florida is prone to hurricane-related flooding with nearly 120 landfalls in recorded history, but most home, business and rental insurance policies do not cover flood damage.

FEMA disaster assistance limits home repair grants to only make a primary residence safe, sanitary and functional, but NFIP policies are much more expansive. For instance, policyholders in Florida have received average payments of about $49,000 after Hurricane Irma for a much wider range of covered losses.

Flooding can occur anywhere, is the most common natural disaster in the United States and often does not result in a federal disaster declaration where FEMA offers help. Almost 25 percent of flood insurance claims come from areas not considered at high risk for flooding.

Policyholders can get financial help to repair or replace property even if there is no federal disaster declaration. The average annual cost of an NFIP policy for homeowners is about $700.

Policyholders can have peace of mind that covered property is protected because NFIP never cancels policies due to repeat losses. Also, there is no payback requirement unlike low-interest disaster loans from the U.S. Small Business Administration.

A single-family residential building can be insured up to a maximum of $250,000 and its contents up to $100,000. Renters can cover contents up to $100,000. Non-residential property owners can insure their building up to $500,000 and contents up to $500,000.
