

FEMA Assistance Can Help Repair or Replace Furnaces

Release Date: Oct 19, 2021

Are you a homeowner who received FEMA assistance for home repairs? Did you later discover that your furnace was damaged or destroyed by Hurricane Ida?

If your furnace was not covered by your insurance, FEMA may be able to provide additional assistance to repair or replace it. But you must appeal to FEMA in writing and include verifiable repair receipts or estimates.

FEMA may pay up to the actual cost of the receipt or estimate for a furnace. If you repaired or replaced the furnace, FEMA may provide assistance when valid estimates or receipts are submitted on appeal. When you apply for assistance, be sure to report any Hurricane Ida-related damage to the furnace.

The funding is available to eligible survivors in Bronx, Kings, Nassau, Queens, Richmond, Rockland, Suffolk, and Westchester counties, which were included in the Hurricane Ida federal disaster declaration. Only owner-occupied primary homes can be considered for assistance. Vacation homes and second homes are not eligible.

Home Repair Assistance is available only to homeowners for uninsured or underinsured items and disaster-related expenses intended to make the residence safe, sanitary and functional. Some FEMA assistance is also available for other structural components at your primary home including wells, septic systems, water heaters and other electrical appliances.

Keep in mind: You must submit your written appeal within 60 days of the date of your FEMA determination letter. And be sure to include documentation to support the appeal request such as verifiable repair receipts or estimates, contractor estimates or other evidence to support your appeal.

Once you've sent FEMA an appeal, you can expect a decision letter within 90 days after FEMA receives it.
