An applicant for FEMA disaster assistance will receive a letter explaining the status of the application. If you disagree with FEMA's decision, you can appeal.?????

FEMA Decision Letter

An applicant may need to submit additional information or supporting documentation for FEMA to continue to process an application. Examples of missing documentation may include proof of insurance coverage; settlement of insurance claims or denial letter from insurance provider; proof of identity; proof of occupancy; proof of ownership; and proof that the damaged property was the applicant's primary residence at the time of the disaster.

For answers to questions about the letter, go online to DisasterAssistance.gov or call 800-621-3362. (If you use a relay service, such as video relay [VRS], captioned telephone or other service, give FEMA the number for that service.)

Appealing FEMA's Decision

An applicant who disagrees with FEMA's decision or the amount of assistance awarded may submit an appeal letter and supporting documents such as a contractor's estimate for home repairs.

An appeal must be in writing. In a signed and dated letter, explain the reason(s) for the appeal. It should also include an applicant's full name; the FEMA disaster number (FEMA DR-4632-AL for the Alabama disaster); the address of the pre-disaster primary residence; an applicant's current phone number and address; and the FEMA application number on all documents.

If someone other than an applicant or co-applicant writes the appeal letter, that person must sign it and provide FEMA with a signed statement authorizing the individual to act on behalf of the applicant.
