

Understanding Your FEMA Letter

Release Date: Nov 30, 2022

South Carolina residents who applied for assistance from FEMA after sustaining damage from Hurricane Ian Sept. 25 to Oct. 4 will receive a determination letter from FEMA. It may say the applicant is ineligible for assistance, but that is not a denial. Applicants are given a reason for the ineligibility and told what they need to do to become eligible. Often, they need only send more information.

Read your FEMA letter carefully

- If you are eligible for FEMA assistance, the letter will state the dollar amount of your grant and how the funds should be used. If your letter states that you are ineligible at this time, the letter will explain why and tell you how you can appeal that decision.
- Sometimes, applicants did not include documents FEMA is seeking and may need to provide additional information. Examples of missing documentation may be proof of insurance coverage, settlement of insurance claims, proof of identity, proof of occupancy, proof of ownership and/or proof that the damaged property was the applicant's primary residence when Hurricane Ian struck.

Have 60 Days to Send FEMA Your Appeal

- If you disagree with FEMA's decision about whether you are eligible for assistance, or the amount of assistance you were awarded, send FEMA an appeal letter and documents supporting your claim.
- The most important part of the appeal process is knowing your deadlines. Count 60 days from the date FEMA has on the determination letter. Circle that date on your calendar to remind you it's the last day to send FEMA your appeal. Keep in mind that after FEMA receives your letter, you may receive a phone call or a follow-up letter asking for more information.

Include Evidence to Support Your Appeal Request

- It is important to include the documents or information FEMA requests. Having the right documents for every claim helps FEMA fight fraud and scams. Here's what you may need to include with your appeal letter:
 - A copy of the FEMA determination letter.
 - Insurance letters: Your insurance company might give you just a fraction of what you need to repair your home, not enough to help you get into another place, or not enough to replace certain belongings. Keep in mind that FEMA cannot give you a grant for something your insurance company already paid you for.
 - Proof of occupancy: A copy of a utility bill, a driver's license, a lease or bank statement, a local school document, motor vehicle registration or an employer's letter. All can be used to prove the damaged home or rental was your primary residence. "Primary" means you lived there during a major part of the year.
 - Proof of ownership: Mortgage or insurance documents; tax receipts or a deed; receipts for major repairs or improvements dating as far back as 2016; a mobile home park letter or a court document. If your documents were lost or destroyed, click on www.usa.gov/replace-vital-documents for information on how to replace them.
 - Contractors' estimates for home repairs.

Mail, Fax or Upload Your Appeal Letter, and Don't Forget to Sign and Date It

- You have 60 days from the date on your FEMA determination letter to mail, fax or upload your appeal if you want FEMA to reconsider their first decision. Sign and date your appeal. And don't forget to include your nine-digit FEMA application number, your disaster number (DR-4677-SC), and documents you can show as proof.

Mail: FEMA National Processing Service Center, P.O. Box 10055, Hyattsville, MD 20782-8055

Fax: 800-827-8112, Attention: FEMA

Setup a disaster assistance account

- An easy way to provide any additional information needed is to set up an online account and upload documents there. To set up or upload documents, go to

You Can Expect After Submitting Your Appeal Letter

- You’ve written your appeal and sent it to FEMA within 60 days after you received their determination letter. Now what? You may receive a call or letter from FEMA asking for more information. Or FEMA may schedule another inspection of your primary home. Whichever the case, once you’ve sent FEMA an appeal, you can expect a decision letter within 90 days after FEMA receives it.

Still have questions about your FEMA letter?

- If you have questions about your FEMA letter, call the FEMA Helpline at 800-621-3362. If you use video relay service (VRS), captioned telephone service or others, give FEMA the number for that service. Helpline operators are available from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily. Press 2 for Spanish. Press 3 for an interpreter who speaks your language.
