

Continued Rental Assistance: It's here if You Need it

---

Release Date: Apr 25, 2024

Rhode Island residents in Kent, Providence and Washington counties affected by the storms and flooding that occurred December 17-19, 2023 and January 9-13, 2024 could be eligible for continued rental assistance for temporary housing through FEMA's Individuals and Households Program. FEMA pays temporary rent, including a security deposit, at a place other than your damaged home, to help you get back on your feet.

Your rental can be a house, apartment or hotel. The assistance includes essential utilities such as electricity and water, but not cable or Internet. The approved rental amount will be based on fair market rates for your area as determined by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Continued rental assistance may be available based on ongoing need if suitable housing is not available or you haven't completed a permanent housing plan. If you intend to seek continued rental assistance, you'll need receipts to show you used your previous temporary housing assistance for rent. Keep your receipts for three years.

To be eligible for continued rental assistance, you must meet the following conditions:

- You used your rental assistance on rent.
- You are unable to return home because it cannot be accessed or is not suitable to live in due to the disaster.
- You do not have money for housing without assistance.
- You are not receiving temporary housing help from any other source.
- You provide the status of your permanent housing plan.

The completed application may require these supporting documents:

- Pre-disaster and current household income status.
