The demonstrations are sponsored by the Heritage Emergency National Task Force (HENTF), a coalition of more than 60 national organizations and federal agencies co-sponsored by FEMA and the Smithsonian Institution. HENTF works to protect cultural resources throughout the U.S. and its territories from the effects of disasters and emergencies.

If you can't make any of these events, here is an online FEMA resource for more information: www.fema.gov/disaster/recover/save-family-treasures.

If you want to try preserving items on your own, here are some basic procedures to get you started:

- If your prized possessions have been in contact with sewage or any chemicals, you will need professional help.
 - Call IMALERT Hotline (Iowa Museums, Archives and Libraries Emergency Response Team) at 319-384-3673. They accept calls from members of the public and can provide advice and suggest a conservator who can help you.
 - Other sources of help include the Ford Conservation Center in Omaha, 402-595-1180, and the Midwest Art Conservation Center in Minneapolis at 612-870-3120.
- Gentle air-drying indoors is best for all your treasured belongings. Hair dryers, irons, ovens and prolonged exposure to sunlight will do irreversible damage. Increase indoor airflow with fans, open windows, air conditioners and dehumidifiers.

FEMA

- Use great caution in handling your heirlooms, which can be especially fragile when wet. Separate damp materials; remove the contents from drawers; take photographs out of damp albums; remove paintings and prints from frames, place paper towels between the pages of wet books.
- Gently loosen dirt and debris on fragile objects with soft brushes and cloths. Avoid rubbing, which can grind in the dirt.
- Clean photographs by rinsing them carefully in clean water. Air-dry photos on a plastic mesh screen or paper towel, or by hanging them by the corner with plastic clothespins. Don't let the image touch any other surfaces as it dries.
- You may not be able to save everything, so focus on what's most important to you, whether for historic, monetary or sentimental reasons.
