

Spend Your FEMA Funds Wisely

Release Date: Th3 21, 2024

Remember to spend FEMA assistance funds only for specified disaster-related expenses.

As you start to receive funds for rental assistance, home repairs, or other categories of assistance, be assured federal disaster assistance funds are tax-free. FEMA's notification letter will inform you of the appropriate use of disaster assistance funds. You are expected to use assistance funds only for their intended purpose. Not doing so can compromise future assistance eligibility.

FEMA will send survivors a notification letter informing them of the types of assistance they are eligible to receive, and the amounts of assistance FEMA is providing for each eligible need. These may include:

- Repairs to make a home safe, sanitary, and fit to live in.
- Rental assistance to temporarily pay for a place to stay.
- Repair or replacement of a disaster-damaged essential vehicle.
- Medical care for an injury caused by the disaster.
- Replacing clothing, occupational tools and educational materials.
- Moving and storage expenses related to the disaster.
- Replacing medical equipment.

Federal law prohibits FEMA from duplicating assistance that is available from other sources, such as insurance.

If you do not use your FEMA assistance funds as described above, you may be asked to repay FEMA and you may become ineligible for further federal assistance that could become available.

Do not use your assistance funds for travel, entertainment, or any expenses not related to the disaster. You should keep receipts for three years to show how you spent FEMA grants and document how your disaster funds were used.
