

Understanding Your FEMA Letter

Release Date: ?? 26, 2024

Spokane, Wash. - If you applied for FEMA assistance for the Gray and Oregon Wildfires, you'll receive a letter from FEMA. It will explain what assistance you are eligible to receive. If the letter states you are ineligible for assistance, you can appeal the decision.

Common Reasons for Ineligibility

First, read your letter carefully to determine why FEMA couldn't process your application. Some of the most common reasons are:

- Missing documents. In many cases, ineligibility occurs when vital documents are missing. If these documents are received within 60 days of the letter, the application process could continue.

Make sure your application includes copies of:

- Insurance documents: proof that the property was covered by insurance, and that the coverage or settlement was not enough to complete essential repairs.
- Proof of identity: Accepted documents include your passport, Social Security card, federal or state I.D., military I.D., or a payroll stub that shows all or part of your Social Security number.
- For a complete list of documents that can prove identity, visit Options to Verify Your Identity with FEMA | FEMA.gov.
- Damage was covered by insurance: FEMA cannot duplicate benefits, which means the agency can't pay for damage covered by another source. However, unmet needs not covered by any other source of recovery assistance could still be addressed by FEMA.
- Damage did not make your home unsafe to live in. FEMA assistance will cover the cost of making your home habitable but can't cover repairing or replacing non-essential items.

- Proof of occupancy (homeowners and renters): lease, utility bills, driver's license, letter from a mobile home park manager or public official, or other document that shows the damaged home was your primary residence when the disaster occurred.
- Proof of ownership (homeowners only): deed, mortgage statement, property tax bill, letter from a mobile home park manager, or other document that shows you own your home.
- For a complete list of documents that can prove ownership or occupancy, visit Verifying Home Ownership or Occupancy | FEMA.gov.

How to Appeal

Within 60 days of the date on FEMA's letter, gather any documents or information requested. Then write a letter to explain why you're appealing. Make sure to include:

- Applicant's full name and signature
- FEMA disaster number: for this disaster, "FEMA DR 4759 WA"
- The date
- 9-digit application number on all documents

Submit your letter, supporting documents and the cover page from FEMA's letter in one of these ways:

- Mail to: FEMA National Processing Service Center, P.O. Box 10055, Hyattsville, MD 20782-7055
- Fax to 800-827-8112 (Attention: FEMA)
- Upload to your account on DisasterAssistance.gov

Once FEMA receives your appeal, they may contact you by phone or mail to ask for more information or schedule another home inspection. You will receive a decision letter within 90 days.
