

Claims Office Releases Appeals Guide, Outlining Steps and Rights for Claimants Seeking Fair Compensation

Release Date: ??? 15, 2024

SANTA FE, N.M. — The FEMA Hermit's Peak/Calf Canyon Claims Office ("Claims Office") has released a comprehensive appeals guide detailing the policies, procedures, and responsibilities associated with the Claims Office's appeals process. This new guide serves as an essential resource for claimants who wish to dispute their compensation decisions and helps ensure they receive the maximum compensation allowable by law.

The new guide provides clear information on the appeals process, outlines claimants' appeal rights, and explains the steps required to submit an appeal. By defining key terms and standardizing appeals-related procedures, the guide establishes a uniform approach for Claims Office staff handling appeals.

"FEMA wants to provide full compensation to individuals, families, businesses and everyone else impacted by the Hermit's Peak and Calf Canyon fires," said Colt Hagmaier, FEMA's Assistant Administrator for Recovery. "We want to compensate everyone as fully and fairly as we can, so if you are not satisfied with what FEMA is able to offer as compensation, we want you to appeal. We encourage all claimants who believe their compensation determination needs additional review and consideration to use this guide to understand their appeal rights and the process involved."

The appeals guide represents the continued commitment to transparency, objectivity, and thoroughness throughout the claims process, Hagmaier added.

Highlights of the appeals guide:

- Step-by-step instructions for filing an appeal.
- Information on required documentation and deadlines.
- Provisions for claimants requesting additional time to submit documents.
